

Marsha Arons has been teaching English at the Academy since 2001. A published author of hundreds of stories and essays appearing in local, national, and international publications, Mrs. Arons is devoted to helping her students find their own best writing voices. She is proud that many of her students' memoirs--produced in response to a curriculum that she developed--have been published in ICJA's literary magazine, which Mrs. Arons advises. The magazine has been rated "Excellent" three years in a row by the National Council of Teachers of English. Mrs. Arons's kinesthetic approach incorporates drama, art, and music into the study of literature as well as the study of grammar and language mechanics. She hopes to inspire each student to love language and to use it powerfully to define their own identities and to benefit their community at large.

Mrs. Arons is the proud parent of four Ida Crown Jewish Academy alumnae and a past president of the Or Torah Women's Group and the Be'er Miriam AMIT chapter.
